

Sharing Your Pandemic Story

We are living in a unique era of American history. Future historians and our own descendants will want to know how this pandemic affected the lives of rural people. In an effort to collect as many viewpoints, experiences, and stories as possible about how COVID-19 has affected county residents, we are calling on everyone, young and old, to complete this COVID-19 Self Interview. There are no right or wrong responses. Feel free to skip any question you prefer not to answer. Answers can be handwritten, typed, or even recorded. Please sign the release agreement and return it along with your answers.

Whose experience is being recorded? Please give us your name, age, the place you live, and the place you work/attend school.

When did you first learn about the COVID-19 outbreak?

What were your thoughts at that time?

What are your thoughts about the COVID-19 pandemic today?

How have you adapted to the pandemic so far? Has your daily routine changed? How so?

How are you handling the situation? Are you working on certain projects? How are you passing the time?

Did you receive a vaccine? Why or why not? Did you have any adverse symptoms?

I do hereby release, assign, give, and convey to the Stevens County Historical Society and Museum, any and all rights, title, and interest including any copyright or intellectual property interest, in the COVID-19 Self Interview attached. I understand that the interviews will be deposited in the Stevens County Historical Society and Museum archives for use by future scholars and may be used for any lawful purpose in all forms known or unknown in perpetuity.
